The Sanitary Superintendent, has In ordering it is only necessary to state however, apparently intends to include European owners and architects. The jerry builder and his ways are well known, and had Mr. McCallum's remarks been confined to individuals of that class they would not have been too strong, but as applied to prosecution, but adequate and effective Marine Magistrate to hear cases of assault where architects and the generality of owners they supervision by a reliable, responsible, well are, we are persuaded, unjustifiable. Architects as a class may indeed almost be ranked next to doctors as sanitarians. Whatever friction may have arisen in this Colony bepartment it would be fairer to attribute to subordinate officers. honest misunderstanding than to the sordid motives attributed by Mr. McCallum. The next section of the report deals with markets and slaughter houses and the cognate subject of street hawking. The latter, Mr. McCallum says, is to some considerable extent a convenience to the poorer classes of ratepayers, and he deems it expedient to tolerate its continuance, care being taken to prevent the establishment of premanent stalls by the hawkers. As to the slaughter houses, they are, according to the Sanitary Superintendent, so inadequate that really good management is impracticable. This is a state of things which ought not to be allowed to continue, for it is impossible, from a sanitary point of view, to exaggerate the importance of keeping a careful watch on the meat supply of the Colony. Nothing is said in the report as to the condition of the bakeries, but in view of the disgusting disclosures made at Singapore on this subject it would be satisfactory to know that the Sanitary authorities of Hongkong keep an eye on these establishments, especially those under exclusively native management.

On the subject of mortality statistics Mr. McOALLUM says that with such a populathe death-rate should be a remarkably low one, approximating to that of a garrison; but instead of a low there is a high death-rate, high even if the population was a normal one. For the last two years, on the appear- 8 p.m. ance of the annual statistics, we have had Overture .... to call attention to the alarming nature of the death-rate. On section 8, which gives the power to there is no intent to commit felony, The ATTORNET GENERAL said it had been suggested that this clause limited the powers of cases only. It was not intended by this section that the powers at present possessed by the Magistrate should be curtailed in any way, and to prevent any misipprehension he proposed the ensertion of the words "without prejudice to any jurisdiction, power, or authority possessed by him." The clause as amended was passed. In section 17, which gives the Magistrate power to issue a warrant for the arrest of any witness not obeying his summons Hon. Ho Kar objected to the leaving of the

The ATTORNEY-GENERAL said this clause did not provide for the retention of the power at present possessed here by a Magistrate, of ordering a defendant to enter into recognizances whether he was convicted or not. The question was, although perhaps such a proceeding might be desirable, whether it was logical. It seemed to him that he ought not to have the the power to send a man to prison—because he could do so if the man could not find sureties when he was not able to convict him of anything Magistrate had had this power for nearly 50 years | perty of Yune Akung, on the 3rd inst. and he fancied the Magistrates here would solt was on the Bench he found the power very Chinese mind. Ho Kar objected to the power to bi over when there was no conviction The Acting Colonial Secretary said a very common instance where the power was exercised here was where disturbances on an extensive scale had taken place: the Magistrate often bound the defendants over to keep the beace without absolutely convicting them and had been found that such a proceeding had had the effect of quietening things down.

The ATTORNEY-GENERAL proposed to amend the clause as it stood by leaving with Magistrate the power new possessed by usertion of the words "whether the defendant shall be convicted or not" and by striking out the last part of the clause which gave Magistrate the power to commit the defendant to prison in default of his not complying with he order for entering into recognisances. No matter what function music may be called upon to perform, whether it be to appeal to our emotions and imagination as pure form and colour in the symphony or sonata, or to heighten and idealise the expression of poetry in the song, the cantata or the lyric drama, it would be contrary to every known law of nature for it to relinquish any principle of organic structure that has been evolved from its own substance, and in accordance with its own laws. This or that particular musical form may become extinct and make way for others in the general and unceasing struggle for existence, and only the fittest will survive; and what is fit to-day may Lucon Sugar be unfit to-merrow.
